PERFORMER (MALE) – Michael Therriault

"This is the role of a lifetime. Tommy Douglas has touched the life of every Canadian," says Michael Therriault. "He was a hero, a valiant fighter. But he was also tender and funny. It's a tremendous privilege to explore the public and private life of the architect of so many of the social programs which are critical to Canada. But, it's also a tremendous responsibility."

Prairie Giant: The Tommy Douglas Story was Therriault's feature length screen debut.

"Film was a whole new world for me. Scenes shot out of chronological order, quick takes, short rehearsals, playing to the camera and not the back row - I had a lot to learn. I was lucky to be working with not only very talented but very patient people."

The award-winning Therriault is one of the most respected young actors in the country. Recently, he played Leo Bloom in the Canadian production of Mel Brooks' The Producers. For that performance, he received the Dora Award for Best Actor in a Musical.

Prior to that, he spent seven seasons at the Stratford Festival of Canada. Therriault's Shakespearian classic roles include: Henry VI in both Henry VI: Revenge in France and Henry VI: Revolt in England; Silvius in As You Like It; Ariel in The Tempest; and Francis Flute in A Midsummer Night's Dream.

He has also been seen at Stratford in the modern classics The Seagull, Oscar Remembered, Fiddler on the Roof; and Camelot. With the Stratford Company, he toured to New York in The Miser and Much Ado About Nothing. Therriault was a member of the inaugural season of The Stratford Festival's Conservatory for Classical Theatre Training. He has also appeared in Ken Finkleman's The Newsroom.

As soon as he wrapped the role of Tommy Douglas, Therriault left Saskatchewan for New York and Broadway to play Motel in Fiddler on the Roof.

In February 2006, the musical production of The Lord of the Rings opened in Toronto. Michael Therriault played Gollum opposite Brent Carver's Gandalf, a role for which he received his second Dora Award.

Therriault is cast as Harry Vincent in The Englishman's Boy opposite Nicholas Campbell.

DIRECTOR – John N. Smith

John N. Smith is one of Canada's most recognized and sought after filmmakers.

For over 30 years, in documentaries, feature film and television, Smith has used his unique cinematic vision to tell seminal Canadian stories.

Prairie Giant: The Tommy Douglas Story is a perfect fit in Smith's repertoire.

"This is a story of a great, great man. He stood for genuine, decent ideals and he never wavered, he never sold out. He didn't just talk about how the world should be. He fought fear, vested interests and the power elite to make changes himself."

And he made those changes in Saskatchewan. Smith speaks of filming in the province, "I wanted to shoot this story in Saskatchewan because this is where Tommy made history. I wanted to be surrounded by people who know what Saskatchewan is, who Tommy Douglas was and what he did for the province and then for the country. People here feel very strongly about Tommy Douglas and they have a depth of knowledge and sensitivity to this story. That's a great advantage for filmmakers."

Smith may be best known for the touchstone miniseries The Boys of St. Vincent. Dealing with sexual abuse of boys by priests, the provocative miniseries won numerous international awards including a Peabody Award, seven Gemini Awards including Best Dramatic Miniseries and Best Director, two gold medals and two bronze medals at the New York Festival of Broadcasting as well as awards in Italy, France and Germany.

His other television credits include the miniseries Dieppe (1995 Gemini, Best Dramatic Miniseries and 10 other nominations), Revenge of the Land and Random Passage (2002 winner of two Gemini Awards and four other nominations).

His feature film credits include Geraldine's Fortune starring Jane Curtin and Mary Walsh, Dangerous Minds with Michelle Pfeiffer and A Cool, Dry Place starring Monica Potter and Vince Vaughn.

Smith is currently directing the Minds Eye Entertainment mini-series The Englishman's Boy.

the corporate, commercial, government and film sectors for over 15 years, McCoy worked from 1991 to 1996 at CBC TV as a graphic designer, and has done set design and props for several local theatre productions.

She holds a Visual Communications degree from the Alberta College of Arts in Calgary. McCoy is the production designer for The Englishman's Boy, a four-hour mini-series currently in production.

As a composer, he is responsible for the theme and underscoring on the Canadian Antiques Roadshow (CBC).

Bryanton lives in Regina with his family and is currently involved with the production of Minds Eye Entertainment's mini-series The Englishman's Boy.

DIRECTOR OF PHOTOGRAPHY – Pierre Letarte

Director of Photography Pierre Letarte's extensive resume includes some of the most provocative dramas and documentaries made in Canada.

Smith includes the miniseries Random Passage (2002 Gemini, Best Photography), Revenge of the Land, Dieppe (1995 Gemini, Best Dramatic Miniseries) and The Boys of St. Vincent (1994 Gemini, Best Dramatic Miniseries) and the features Dangerous Minds starring Michelle Pfeiffer and Geraldine's Fortune starring Jane Curtin and Mary Walsh.

Letarte is a master of light and tone.

"Filming on location in Saskatchewan was critical to the integrity of this miniseries," he explains. "The light and colours we captured in towns like Gravelbourg, Claybank and Pense could not have been found elsewhere. The people of those communities who volunteered as background performers
